

Life with Cancer

I'm Erin Zammett Ruddy, Glamour editor and leukemia patient. My blog's all about living with cancer—the ups, the downs, the craziness of it all.

Cool stuff, great cause

Does this make you want to go back to school or what?

I love school supplies. When I was growing up I played "office" and "school" just as much as I played Barbies. That's why I love this amazing fundraising idea that just hit shelves. Jacqueline Savage McFee, a hip designer of pads, pencils and all the other back-to-school stuff I crave, partnered with the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society to create a totally fun and totally fabulous collection of school supplies to raise money for the Society. It's called The Kendall Collection, in honor of Jackie's 4-year-old cousin Kendall Sierens, who was diagnosed with leukemia at age two. Kendall is now in remission—and cuter than ever (check out her pictures on Jackie's site) and her family is hoping to raise money to help other patients battling these awful diseases. I am totally onboard. In fact, I used a Kendall composition book to write three to-do lists on my way home last night. I felt very cool.

You can find The Kendall Collection at Wal-Mart, Fred Meyer and a bunch of other retail stores. For more info check out jackiemcfee.com
